Molokai's East & North Shores Blessed with Big Surf

White water around Mokuhooniki Island located about one mile off the northeast shore of Molokai is the indicator of large waves rolling onto reefs of the rugged coastline. These waves are in the 10 to 12 feet range, perfect shape for surfing this past weekend, but nobody was seen riding these. Further south at Rock Pt., the waves were close to shore and hollow, and crowded.

Obama Threatens Alan Keyes and Other Eligibility Plaintiffs

- ALAN KEYES

As many of you know, I am party to one of the lawsuits seeking evidence that would help to establish, one way or the other, whether Obama in fact meets the U.S. Constitution's eligibility requirements for the office of President of the United States. [For background view of the critical issues involved see the WND articles The End of the Constitutional Republic, and Obama, Oaths and the End of Constitutional Government.] Obama's lawyers have filed a motion to quash our effort to obtain the relevant documents (cf. Bob Unruh's WND article Sanctions sought in eligibility case.) I am told that it includes a demand that monetary penalties be assessed against me and the other plaintiffs in the suit. Though not unexpected, this motion confirms Obama's ruthless determination to destroy anyone who continues to seek the information the Constitution requires of him if he is to serve as President of the United States of America. Why should they demand penalties against citizens who are simply seeking the enforcement of the Supreme Law of the Land? It is simply because their persistence runs contrary to the will of a supposedly popular demagogue? This smacks of tyrannical arrogance. That Obama thus signals his intent to bring financial ruin on those who won't accept his cover-up of the circumstances of his birth is a tactical escalation. It confirms the common sense suspicion that he won't act forthrightly in this matter because he has something to hide.

As one of the targets of this escalation, I need no more convincing proof of the ruthless disposition so far successfully masked by his empty rhetoric of hope and change. Obviously he means to offer hope only to those willing to surrender their most basic rights. To any who insist on questioning his actions, he offers the drastic change of ruin and destruction. So be it. We shall be among those who learn firsthand the meaning of the sacrifices made by the Founders of our free republic, as they pledged and gave up their lives, their fortunes and the world's esteem.

To tell you the truth, I expected Obama's ruthlessness, as I expect that it will escalate until his threats extend to liberty and even life itself. Tyrants are like that. What I am not so certain of is the disposition of the people of this country, and in particular of those who still avow allegiance to the Constitutional Republic. For all their posturing in opposition to Obama's socialist schemes, Republican Party leaders show no disposition to notice, much less decry, his determination to subvert the Constitution. But does the self-serving reticence of such so-called leadership truly represent the disposition of the people whose sovereignty they seem so ready to abandon?

In politics as in war, real leadership does not consist in titles and position, but in those willing to stand in the forefront of the battle, where taunts and wounds and even death await the ones who raise a rallying flag. The fate of that flag depends, however, not on their willingness to brave the dangers, but on the courage and heart of those who, seeing that flag, return with renewed courage to the fight. Though they not know not if it will stand or fall, will they decide that either way it should not meet its fate without them?

People who have been watching recent events with any discernment must realize by now that, for all his talk of material salvation for the masses, the Obama faction really means to strengthen only those willing to serve in the army of their domineering ambition. Thanks to the phony stimulus package, they will soon have billions of taxpayer dollars with which to nourish this servile allegiance to his will.

Including myself, many of the people willing to articulate and act against his overthrow of Constitutional liberty have nothing in their coffers except the grace from God to see a little truth, and the courage to speak it, drawing upon the example of His Son. But time and again in America's history, a little truth has been sufficient to reach into the reserve of love for God and liberty on tap in the patriot hearts and consciences of those who would be free.

So to my fellow plaintiffs with the courage to stand firm, and to all those who may lose by the price they pay for it, I say keep faith and pray- not so much for yourselves as for the heart and conscience of the good people of your country. Trust that there still burns a candlelight of liberty within them, and a thought for those who would rather be consumed as its wick than surrender to the wickedness that now seeks its destruction.

SFish Die on Niihau Island

Niihau residents still aren't eating fish months after thousands of dead fish washed ashore.

The dead fish appeared in mid-January shortly after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service dumped rat poison on nearby Lehua island on behalf of the state Department of Land and Natural Resources.

Lehua is less than a mile north of Niihau, a privately owned island with a population of about 100.

Niihau residents say they still haven't been told whether the rat poison and dead fish are related.

In the interim, they've avoided consuming fish, a diet staple.

The state Department of Health issued an advisory in February urging residents on the private island not to eat fish from nearby waters.

"We still don't know what's happening," said Keith Robinson, a member of the family that owns Niihau. "We still don't know whether it is safe to eat fish, and we are still looking for an official statement."

Robinson added that there are reportedly about a dozen monk seals who used to regularly visit the island and have recently "gone missing," while others appear "extremely sick."

He said, however, that residents haven't had a food shortage and haven't been in serious need of food and supplies. A report posted on the Association of Hawaiian Civic Clubs Web site erroneously reported the island needed food, he said.

Robinson said the island's supply barge arrived last weekend and there was no such shortage of food or supplies.

"The supply line of food to Niihau is open, but the bottom line is the people have not been able to go back to eating fish. The Department of Health has not given us clearance," he added.

Janice Okubo, Department of Health spokesman, said the department never actually issued a direct ban for eating fish on Niihau.

"It was an advisory; people need to use their own common sense and judgment," she said when asked whether Niihau fishing could resume. "For us to do a ban and to enforce it, we would have to have really strong evidence."

Ilei Beniamina, a part-time Niihau resident who is an assistant professor in counseling at Kauai Community College, believes residents aren't getting enough vital nutrients that the fish once provided, such as protein and calcium.

"Our people depend on the ocean. The ocean is their Costco," said Beniamina.

Dead whales, Fish Kills & a Super-cavitation Submarine

March 17, 2009, Joan Conrow discussed two Humpback whale strandings on or near Kauai on Jan. 21 and Feb. 9 respectively. In the same story Joan described fish kills in the same time period and the concerns of scientists as to whether or not the whale strandings and fish kills were related and whether they were caused by sonar tests, underwater explosions or toxins in the water. No conclusions were reached. In the same story, Joan reported that scientists working on Lehua had been told by DARPA representatives that they could not be on the island for 3 nights between Jan. 3 and mid Feb. Lehua is a very small island north of Ni'ihau.

To read Joan's story go to islandbreath.org. Then scroll down to the 12th story on the left labeled "DARPA"

DARPA is a government agency that supports exotic military projects. Clearly, an exotic project was being conducted during the period of the whale strandings and fish kills.

The following is an attempt to investigate the exotic DARPA project that very likely killed 2 Humpback whales and a large number of fish. The project probably involved the testing of a super-cavitation submarine under DARPA's so-called "Underwater Express Program". I came across this program a few days ago while doing a Google Search on DARPA. The key paragraph is as follows:

Stop War on Drugs 2009

Every day that goes by, 4,000 people are arrested for drug offenses, the vast majority of them minor, and half a million nonviolent drug offenders languish in the staggering number of prisons and jails the fascist Police State American government has very unwisely built. Obama promised to stop it! WELL.....??

It's time to stop this senseless tragedy and shocking injustice.

What will Barack Hussein Obama do about What Happened on 9-11-01?

On September 11, 2001, we Americans were the victims of TREASON.

By September 12, we Americans all became the suspects watched by FBI.

Not one single U.S. citizen hijacked a plane, yet President Bush and DOJ, through powers seized and codified in the fascist USA PATRIOT Act, labeled 270 million of us for surveillance, for searches, for tracking, for prison without charges. Welcome to the New World Order! Police State USA!

So, what will Obama do to restor freedom if he is President?

Presidential Candidates Need No Proof of Eligibility, says Calif. Judge

A California judge has ruled that anyone can run for president on the California ballot – whether or not they are eligible under the Constitution for the United States of America. Judge Michael P. Kenny threw out a case raising questions over President Barack Obama's eligibility that had been brought by Gary Krep of the United States Justice Foundation on behalf of Ambassador Alan Keyes, a 2008 presidential candidate.

"Secretary of State Debra Bowen contends that there is no basis for mandamus relief because the Secretary of State has no 'ministerial duty' to demand detailed proof of citizenship from presidential candidates," said Kenny.

Yet, California in the past has exercised the authority to determine whether presidential candidates are qualified, and remove them from the ballot if they are not, examples cited in Keys' lawsuit.

The lawsuit continued with the warning, "If MR. OBAMA is not constitutionally eligible to serve as President of the United States, then no act that he takes is, arguably, valid, the laws that he signs would not be valid, the protective orders that he signs would be null and void, and every act that he takes would be subject to legal challenge, both in Courts of the United States of America, and in International Courts, and that, therefore, it is important for the voters to know whether he, or any candidate for President in the future, is eligible to serve in that office."

A writ of mandate can only issue if the respondent, election officer in this case, has a clear, present, and usually ministerial duty and the petitioner has a clear, present, and beneficial interest in the performance of that duty. ... Code of Civil Procedure section 1085 is 'to compel the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins, as a duty resulting from office, trust or station, or to compel the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right or office to which the party is entitled," the judge wrote.

"Petitioners have not identified any authority requiring the Secretary of State to make an inquiry into or demand detailed proof of citizenship from Presidential candidates.

The judge also threw out a subpoena issued to Occidental College to provide copies of Obama's records of attendance there as Obama's attorneys wanted.

"As one of the targets of this escalation, I need no more convincing proof of the ruthless disposition so far successfully masked by his empty rhetoric of hope and change. Obviously he means to offer hope only to those willing to surrender their most basic rights. To any who insist on questioning his actions, he offers the drastic change of ruin and destruction. So be it. We shall be among those who learn firsthand the meaning of the sacrifices made by the Founders of our free republic, as they pledged and gave up their lives, their fortunes and the world's esteem," Keyes said.

Crimes of Politicians Must Be Stopped by The People (You are The Militia)

The crime on our streets is a tiny fraction of the crime in the offices of our politicians and bureaucrats - the massive majority of crime is committed by the criminal classes in power. Just look at the constant abuse of power in our State government offices and you will realize the extent of crime in Government. Just consider just how many BILLIONS of dollars a day Government extorts from the people and how little WE get in return; and just how comfortable the politicians make themselves at the expense of the peoples they extort!

The goal of the founders of America was to restrict government within severe limits and to protect the rights of sovereign individuals. Government has NO rights! Judges are impeachable. Furthermore, judges may be removed immediately for violating oaths of office, involvement in conspiracies, extortion, and failing to uphold their duty to the common law. Judges can also be arrested, they are not exempt from this nor are any other officials, including the President of the United States.

Do the people have the power to do this? Yes, the people have the power to do everything to defend our country against all enemies foreign or domestic politician, and government has no power to say otherwise. Fascist bureaucrats might send out its armed marauders, but a huge group of The People (Militia) armed with guns as guaranteed their Right to keep and bear arms by the 2nd Amendment is likely to stop them unless the governments decide that it is time to begin mass killings of all people who believe in the rights of Man.

Wake up ! Enforce the Bill of Rights !

Dead whales, Fish & a Super-cavitation Submarine?

"In 2005, DARPA announced the 'Underwater Express program', a research and evaluation bid to establish the potential of super-cavitation. The program's ultimate goal is a new class of underwater craft for littoral missions that can transport small groups of Navy personnel or specialized military cargo at speeds up to 100 knots. The contracts were awarded to Northrop Grumman and General Dynamics Electric Boat in late 2006".

So what is the "Underwater Express Program"? First a few words about both "cavitation" and "super-cavitation". Cavitation is an effect caused by small localized pressure differences in water - often due to the motion of a propeller. The pressure differences lead to the formation of small bubbles which then collapse and can damage metal parts. Whereas "cavitation" is related to small collapsing bubbles, "super-cavitation" refers to a single giant non-collapsing bubble which is formed in a very special way so that it wraps part way around the front end of a moving torpedo or submarine.

So how is this giant bubble formed?? First, it requires that the torpedo or submarine be propelled by a rocket engine. As the rocket fuel burns the torpedo or submarine is propelled forward as a reaction to the gas shooting out the rear end. Now comes the tricky part. The front end of the torpedo or submarine is cleverly designed so that a small part of the exhaust gas emerges from the front end and pushes outward against the water. The gas then forms a bubble which grows and moves backward along the body and partially envelopes the torpedo or submarine. There is much less friction between water and the surface of the giant bubble than there is between water and the surface of an ordinary torpedo or submarine. - So when a giant bubble is wrapped part way around either a rocket-driven torpedo or submarine, either vessel can travel a lot faster than a normal torpedo or submarine.

In fact, a super-cavitation torpedo can travel at a speed of almost 300 miles/hour - whereas a super-cavitation submarine can reach a speed of about 100 miles/hour. When I first learned about super-cavitation many years ago, I found it hard to believe that it was a real effect.

From here on I will mostly write "S-C" in place of super-cavitation. Both the S-C torpedo and the S-C submarine seem more like science fiction than science fact.

But they do exist. In fact, The S-C torpedo has been around since 1977 but you may have never heard of it. Russia developed the first S-C torpedo - called the "Shkval" and has sold one or more to China. In 2006 Iran tested an S-C torpedo called the "Hoot" which means "Whale". Perhaps, the United States has decided that it is time to catch up.

The S-C submarine is probably a fairly new item. I had never heard of it until I read about DARPA'S underwater express program during my recent Google search.

In any case, the existence of the "Underwater Express Program points to DARPA as being responsible for the fish kills and whale strandings near Kauai because DARPA is the same outfit that told scientists working on Lehua that they could not be on the island at night for 3 nights between Jan. 3 and mid February of this year. It is quite likely that a DARPA contractor was testing one or more S-C submarines. The contractor may also have been testing S-C torpedoes

So how were the whales and fish actually killed?? Here's one way!! The burnt rocket fuel ejected from either an S-C submarine or from an S-C torpedo is bound to make one hell of a loud noise - probably far louder than the noise from the loudest sonar in the whole wide world. It probably sounds like a continuing series of loud explosions. This might kill or injure anything in the neighborhood in a way that the loudest sonar never would.

The above does not explain the evidence in Joan Conrow's story that chemicals or toxins may have caused or contributed to the fish kills. I e-mailed Dr. Carl Berg, a marine researcher on Kauai who had worked with some of the dead fish. Dr. Berg responded that he had not previously thought of an S-C submarine or torpedo as the cause of the fish kills. He then pointed out that the unused or burnt rocket fuel would be highly toxic to fish - and maybe even to whales. Dr. Berg's comments greatly strengthen the case against DARPA.

And why did DARPA insist that the scientists on Lehua not be on the island during the nights of the "secret" tests. I suspect that DARPA wanted to deliberately conduct the tests close to Lehua so that they could observe the results from high points on the island. Also DARPA wanted to conduct the tests at night for easier observation. A submerged rapidly moving C-S submarine or torpedo might be hard to observe in the daytime but at night the light from the rocket motors would put on a brilliant display which should be easy for anyone to observe. Also, the underwater noise from the rocket engines might have been loud enough to penetrate the water surface and wake up the sleeping scientists. These factors would clearly identify the fact that the tests involved a rocket-driven submarine Perhaps the rocket engines might even explode.

It should be pointed out that S-C torpedoes and S-C submarines are not great underwater weapons despite their great speed - at least not yet. They both have serious problems with stability. If the giant enclosing bubbles should inadvertently change shape and lose symmetry, the vessels might veer off in unwanted directions. Also, both the S-C torpedo and the S-C submarine tend to go in straight lines. In the case of the S-C torpedo there may be no way to change direction from a distance. However, an S-C submarine could be designed with a series of jets so that the direction of the ejected fuel could be controlled by the pilot of the submarine. It might take a lot of underwater testing to get it right - but does DARPA have to test in Hawaiian waters during the Humpback whale season.

The fact that only two Humpback Whales were found stranded does not mean that only two whales were killed. Other dead Humpbacks could have sunk to the bottom or drifted out to sea so the carnage due to DARPA's exotic tests could have been far greater than is now known.

Finally, it should have been clear to both DARPA and it's contractors that the exotic tests north of Ni'ihau would have been a threat to whales and other forms of marine life. I believe that the tests were in obvious violation of the Marine Mammal Protection Act and that DARPA and it's contractors should be prosecuted. In addition, before further such tests are conducted, DARPA should be required to go through the entire EIS process
